- What are the career jobs of the future and their required competences?
- What does it mean to be employable in a society experiencing a transition into a knowledge based economy?
- What do you need to do to be employable?
- Is employability attainable; is it sustainable?
- What are the strategies that you need to consider to enhance your employability in a competitive labor market?

Understanding Cultural Diversity in the Workplace
Dr. Wolfgang Hinck

Globalization has led to an increased frequency of interactions between employees from different cultural backgrounds, often even within the same organization. This workshop will provide a brief introduction to the nature, functions, and selected characteristics of culture. It is designed to aid employees in realizing when culture is the cause of interpersonal conflict and will help them to identify specific cultural variables that need to be addressed to resolve problematic situations.
